While college degrees are definitely a wise investment, there are other options available to you. Rather than go after traditional education, which often involves a large financial commitment, you might want to consider the many free ways to learn. From camps and classes at your local school to your own personal study, there are a number of different ways that you can learn for free. Learning online is also a great way to free up some extra time to pursue an interest that you may have. While none of these options are the same as an education at a school, they can be a great way to help save money. Summer camp A summer program might be a perfect option for some who are interested in learning a skill that will have a lasting impact. While this is likely more than you paid to earn a degree, it's a great way to learn something new that will be beneficial to you in the future. Chats If you're looking for a free way to learn what you always wanted to know, chats are a great way to get started. From video chats to audio chats, chat rooms are a great way to meet people online to share ideas and learn more about a given topic. You can easily find these types of conversations on websites like Facebook or YouTube as well, allowing you to explore potential interests without the commitment of having to travel somewhere. Classes While summer camp and chats are great ways to learn skills or discover an interest that you might not have otherwise, classes are a great way to learn from a teacher in a more structured environment. Many of the resources you would find at a regular college are also available at many of the online classes available. This makes it possible for people to learn on a wide variety of 570a42141b
