A: The default controller that comes with XBOX One is the Xbox 360 controller. If you want to use other controller you can get one here. Neurosurgery for Parkinson's disease. Palliative and therapeutic treatment of Parkinson's disease (PD) with deep-brain stimulation (DBS) has been shown to have a significant impact on quality of life. Following implantation of a deep-brain electrode, motor function can be improved in comparison with drug treatment. The neurological, functional, and psychological adverse events of DBS are different to those with subthalamic nucleus (STN) stimulation in patients with advanced PD, however, they still occur. The surgical technique for placement of electrodes and pulse generator is still complex and can be improved. DBS is emerging as a therapeutic option for motor disturbances in advanced PD.[Hemoglobinopathies and anemia in the elderly]. Anemia is the most frequent disease in elderly population. The most common form of anemia is anemia of chronic disease, especially anemia of chronic disease-not due to blood loss. It may be diagnosed in a first screening, even in the absence of a specific clinical history. Iron deficiency is the most frequent cause of anemia of chronic disease. In the case of iron deficiency, hemoglobin will be low. The assessment of hemoglobin is easy and cheap. The threshold for transfusion in adults and the threshold for the need of a treatment in older people are respectively: Hb 9g/dL (10g/dL) and Hb 7.1g/dL (8.3g/dL). The management of iron deficiency starts with the determination of the ferritin level and the estimation of iron reserves. Iron deficiency is known as the most common disorder in the elderly. It is a disease easily recognized if the diagnosis is known, even if not often associated with any symptom. The management of iron deficiency is fairly simple: a daily intake of 300mg of elemental iron in older people and 200mg of elemental iron in older people is enough to compensate iron losses due to the decrease of absorption in the intestine.Q: How to create ajax request for an array of variable length of elements I have an array that is generated by Jquery and I need to pass that array as a request to another page using ajax. The problem is that this is a dynamic array, it changes everytime I click one of the button. This makes it harder
