public function skills() { return $this->belongsToMany('App\Skill', 'user_skill', 'user_id','skill_id'); } skill model class Skill extends Model { public function users() { return $this->belongsToMany('App\User'); } }

however when I do this $skills = Skill::with('users')->get(); I cant use the validation for checking if a user only has a specific skill

$this->validate($request, [ 'name' =>'required|alpha_dash|between:4,20', 'description' =>'required|alpha_dash|max:100' ]);

I need this to be validated on the fact that the cloned user has a specific skill. In my users controller I have $user = User::find(Auth::user()->id); $newUser = clone $user; if(new Skill::create($newUser->all())){ //do some stuff if no error found }

A: I would approach this by wrapping the validation into a custom validator. The custom validator you create will take the data passed in from the request 6d1f23a050
