I work in a nursing home, so I am very familiar with drug-resistant forms of tuberculosis. I know how much effort it takes to get a "sick person" into a hospital in "time to save the day" while my fellow doctors, nurses, pharmacists, and fellow patients are ill with something much more common. But what about the next day, after that poor doctor makes his rounds for a day of work, missing breakfast and lunch, who knows? I have worked here 5 years and I have seen this happen repeatedly with my colleagues. What is the doctor, nurse, doctor of nurses, a pharmacist, or janitor doing when the patient comes in a day or two after "diagnosis" and the infection has progressed to the point where it will not respond c6a93da74d
