I was born to be an icon.Q: Manually calling function in JavaScript I have a function draw() that takes in a number from the browser using a input type=number. I want to call this function later from my JS file. I wrote: $('#div1').click(function() { draw(1); }); The function draw(n) requires a parameter to be passed in from the browser. However, I cannot assign the number 1 to a variable, and therefore not be able to call the function without actually typing it in. I've read it might be possible to pass an object into the function. I'm not sure how to do this. The function is defined as follows: function draw(n){ if (n > 4) { n = 4; } d3.select('svg').transition().duration(500).selectAll('rect').data(function(d) { return data(d); }).enter().append('rect').transition().duration(500).attr('height', function(d) {return d*2; }) .attr('width', function(d) { return d*2; }) . c6a93da74d
